Mrs. James Blair of St. Louis, president of the board, is heartly in favor of having a permanent structure erected, and in this she is supported heartly by Miss Helen M. Gould, who was appointed chairman of the Building Committee. Mrs. Blair, determined upon sounding the other members of the board, asked for an expression of sentiment on the proposition to erect a permanent structure, which would be known as a Hall of Philanthropy, and every member voted in favor of it. owever, was merely during an informal of the project and no official action was taken.

ADDRESSED BY CARTER Acting upon the advice of President Carter of the National Commission, who addressed of the National Commission, who addressed the members yesterday, the Board of Lady managers will recommend to the National Commission that the Woman's building at the Exposition be of a permapent kind. It will then be submitted to the Louisians Exposition Company for approval. The Ex-position company is willing that the ladies have a temporary structure, but it has not yet passed upon their providing a perma-nent building. that there shall be an enduring monumen to their work that they have already had drawn up plans to carry through their ideas. A resolution which will be submitted at the proper time, provides for the erection of a permanent building, to be known as a Hail of Philanthropy, and gives at length the objects to which the structure will be devoted. The resolutions say, in part:

"It is the opinion of the Board of Lady Management that the formula of the structure will be devoted."

Managers that the founding of an institu-tion to be known as Hall of Philanthrophy went which the World's Fair is intended to commemorate, and a valuable and en-during institution for the education of the people of the United States, resulting in the betterment of all social conditions related to charities and corrections.

SCOPE OF BUILDING. "First-Such building should be suitably constructed for the exhibition of the foreign objects; all objects and convenien known to eclence for the proper equipm of hospitals for the insane; reform schools, jalla, penitentiaries, poorhouses and all oth-er institutions relating to the functions of harities and correction. "Second-All scientific and descriptive literature connected therewith.

"Third-Models and other exhibits of all dads illustrating the value of all such quipment and the uses thereof." It is the unanimous opinion of the board that such an institution will be highly edudisseminate information relating to the treatment and care according to the most approved scientific methods, of all parsons physically and mentally delinquent or otherwise a charge upon the public, and would be of the greatest value in bettering conditions of humanity generally, this inuring to the general good of the whole nation, producing a general improvement in social conditions by the care of those mentally and physically deficient.

When these resolutions were presented for nformal discussion at to-day's session the members were so impressed with the noble work proposed that they decided to hold the matter of a building in abeyance until the matter of a building in abeyance until the matter could be submitted to the National Commission and the Exposition Company. Miss Gould, chairman of the Building Committee, was loudest in praise of the proposed Hall of Philanthropy, and this may be taken as a sign that it will se carried through. The New York member knows no such word as fall and the fac that she is working so earnestly, not only for the success of the Fair, but for the success of anything projected by the Board of Lady Managers, of which she is a mem-

WOMAN ARCHITECT. A surprise was sprung on the members of the board to-day when Mrs. Biair in-troduced Miss Mary Hale, an architect of Columbia, Mo., to the board. Mirs Hale had written Mrs. Blair, asking that she might be permitted to draw up plans for a woman's building. Having no appropria-tion, Mrs. Blair wrote in reply, stating her position, and suggesting that if Miss Ha'e cared to draw up the plans gratis, she would be pleased to submit them to the full board.
This Miss Hale agreed to do, and the plans were submitted to-day, Miss Hale coming on from her home in Missouri to explain

Commissioner of Coal Operators Proposes Federation of Industries to Cope or Co-operate With Labor Federation.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Boston, Nov. 20.—Herman Justi, commis-sioner of the Illinois Coal Operators' Asoctation, delivered a lecture before the Twentieth Century Club to-night, in which he urged the organization of capital. He said, in part: Out of the material which God first gave, from Out of the material which God first gave, from the amaliest atom in nature up to the human heart and brain and brawn, and higher still to the spirit which inspires the whole, man has evolved a social system which has in it the ele-ments of perfection. And yet we know that the system is still not perfect. Nor can it be made perfect until every part, having its special func-tion, has been so systamatized as to become an harmonious part of the great whole. This and harmonious part of the great whole. have solved the so-called labor problem. The following seem to me self-evident propositions:

Capital is entitled to protection and fair dividends.
Labor is entitled to favorable working conditions and to fair wages.
If these results are obtained for both capital and labor the public surely cannot suffer, provided the public at the same time recognizes that it also has some duties.
Under existing conditions there remains no other alternative; capital and labor must approach the issue with these ends in view or else look for a never-ending continuance of the perpetutive of the series of the se chiefs—so also let capital have its chiefs—so also let capital have its chiefs—so also let capital have its chiefs, and let them have their lieutenahus; indeed, let capital follow the example of labor even to the extent of employing a corps of "walking delegate." I'm, let them go to the extent of employing a corps of "walking delegate." I'm, let them go to the extent even of organising a Federation of Industries to cope or co-operate, and the collective wisdom and power both of canital and labor.

I have said that labor is only imperfectly organized, and perhaps those who have read of the vast army of laborers belonging to the different unions and affiliated with the different rederations of labor will expect an explanation, Great numbers enrolled in various associations do not necessarily mean that these men thus enrolled are organized. Unless by association laborers are made more capable, more skilled, more saving of their earnings as well as of their health and strength, more respectful of authority, more watchful of the interests of their employers, more thoughtful of the welfare of wife and children, more loyal to the true principles of their guilds, more obedient to the laws of the land, and more jealous of their country's homor, at home and abroad, these laborers might as well band into mobs and openly proclaim themselves hottle to their fellow-men, to country and to God. It will be infinitely earler to deal with a mob thus sailing under its true colors than with an absociation of so-called workmen pretending the country and to granted labor is neglity organized until organized labor is in practice what it is now in theory.

Many of the members of the union may be appropriately likened to an old nearo down in Kentucky, about whom the story was current years ago, that in prayer meeting one night he said:

must be accomplished through the agencies which dominate an organisation of the forces employed.

In the industrial world these agencies are capital and labor, and that discord exists in the industrial world I ascribe to this: Labor is as yet but imperfectly organized, while capital is not organized at all.

In view of the confusion in the public mind, produced by much that has been said in the prints on an the platform regarding the consolidation of capital and the organization of labor, a word of explanation may be necessary.

In a certain sense labor and capital have been organized or consolidated with different ends in view, but both are coldly selfish, capital having consolidated and labor having organized for the sole purpose of increasing respectively the dividents of capital and the earnings of labor. Solid and the capital having consolidated and labor having organized for the sole purpose of increasing respectively the dividents of capital and the earnings of labor. Solid and the capital in the consolidation on the one hand sind organization on the old organization on the old of the capital in the bread sense and as it applies to all who work with brain or brawn, and with all who go make up what we call in general terms the public.

In the consolidation of capital the capitalist the industrial world. UNIONS.

To me it seems this can best be done by organizing the various industries of the country into voluntary associations. For example, the carpenters have a union—let the builders or contractors have an association; the machinists and molders have their unions—let the manufacturers of machinery and the founders have their association; the declaration of the contractors have an association; the manufacturers of machinery and the founders have their associations, the coal miners have their unions—let
